ABOUT THE FIRM

Wildes & Weinberg P.C., perhaps our country's premier law firm concentrating in the immigration and nationality field, grew out of the practice of Leon Wildes, Esq., a distinguished immigration practitioner in New York City. Founded in 1960, the practice, which originally represented aliens in immigration jeopardy, expanded steadily as word of its outstanding achievements spread in the international community. The firm expanded its practice to include representation of American firms anxious to attract persons with needed skills, and was sought out by major banks and industrial concerns to represent them in their efforts to secure personnel from abroad. Today, the firm consists of four partners, 13 associate attorneys, and a skilled staff of paralegals and support personnel totaling some 50 individuals handling the work of a distinguished and growing clientele.

The original hallmark of the firm remains its prompt and efficient service to its corporate clientele and its immediate accessibility to respond to the needs of its clients.

The firm's practice is limited to immigration and nationality law and includes every aspect of the field. Its active participation in the bar associations in the field places it at the forefront of the U.S. immigration bar and it anticipates, updates its clients, and responds quickly to changes in law and procedure. Its access to the governmental agencies involved in immigration related matters permits it to guide its corporate clients in their compliance obligations and helps to train their staff through seminars and educational programs.

Wildes & Weinberg P.C. is sensitive to the individual needs and culture of its corporate clientele, and prides itself on its responsiveness and knowledge of the law. The staff at Wildes & Weinberg P.C. has extensive ongoing experience dealing with its clients' legal counsel and human resource personnel regarding individual cases.

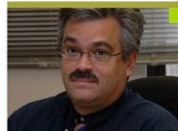

Our ready access to this information and our familiarity with these matters continues to be an invaluable aid in providing quick response and counsel. Since our firm also provides representation in all areas of U.S. immigration, including family immigration, removal proceedings and immigration litigation, we are also a resource capable of providing any incidental services outside of our classic "corporate" immigration practice.
